There is a large amount of research on the health benefits of walking, and it is well established that walking is a low-impact, low-cost, and accessible form of physical activity. Walking is also a good way to stay active and healthy, and it can help to reduce the risk of many chronic diseases, including heart disease, diabetes, and obesity. Walking is also a good way to improve your mood and reduce stress. Walking is a simple and easy way to stay active and healthy, and it can help to improve your overall quality of life.

It is important to note that the results of this study are based on a cross-sectional design. While this design allows for the identification of associations between variables, it cannot establish causality. Therefore, the results suggest a need for further research, including longitudinal studies, to explore the causal relationships between the variables studied.
